it's your week.

Each week 24|seven sifts through every theater, comedy show, and improv troupe, to tell you what's hot and what's not. Because we love you, you cutie.

This week check out
The Common Air.

This funny, all-too-true play stars only ONE man performing all six characters. They're all trapped at an airport during a terrorism scare: an Iraqi cab driver with a can't-miss reality TV pitch, an art gallery owner still in love with his ex, an opinionated corporate lawyer, : a hipster DJ with an intellectual property lawsuit pending, a Texan professor fighting for custody of his son, and an American Iraqi returning from a trip abroad as a caterer--and they're all mysteriously connected.

So...which character is linked to the terrorist plot? Or are they all somehow, some way, linked to it? As the play comes full circle, an all-too-frightening reality--and the way it effects people all around the world--emerges full into view.
